climax

30. October 2025

The relatively stable final stage of vegetation development (succession) that is possible under given site conditions. A forest in the climax stage is referred to as a climax forest or terminal forest. In Central Europe, beech forests are predominantly the climax community.