Forest access development Forest infrastructure

30. October 2025

In the forestry context, forest access refers to the entirety of all measures that ensure the accessibility and reachability of the forest for management, silvicultural operations, timber harvesting, transport, and forest protection. It therefore represents a fundamental prerequisite for sustainable and efficient forest management.