group-selection system, irregular shelterwood system

30. October 2025

Method of stand regeneration in which group shelterwoods and small clearings are initially established in irregular distribution and size, then gradually expanded through subsequent cuttings. Depending on the duration of the regeneration period, this results in mixed stands of uneven age.