river catchment area, basin, watershed

30. October 2025

The hydrological catchment area of a body of water, separated from other catchments by drainage divides, which characterizes the inflows (overall water balance) feeding the watercourses within the basin. Water and element balance calculations can be established for a given watershed.